- Utilizes and calls upon AgForestry graduates to serve as leaders, presenters, and facilitators of these 14 seminars.
- Designs seminars that are modeled on the principles of adult learning styles with emphasis on current and complete information; interactive learning experiences; awareness of learning styles of participants.
- Enthusiastically discovers and supports opportunities for participants to take responsibility for their own learning, setting the environment for seminars, and leading whenever possible.

Guiding Principles

- Every participant is already a leader who is eager to acquire more knowledge and stronger skills.
- Every participant will have an effect on and be a change agent at the local, state, and national levels, both during and after completing the AgForestry Leadership Program.
- Every participant is expected to come to all sessions ready and willing to participate and respect the different needs, styles, and beliefs of their peers.
- Every leader/presenter will come prepared to train, teach, facilitate, or conduct sessions consistent with AgForestry program's GUIDING GOALS.
- Seminar coordinators will be prepared to give participants details on the particular seminar they are coordinating at the seminar immediately ahead of theirs (e.g. Seminar 4 details will be ready to distribute at the end of Seminar 3).
